FRIDAY 29 AUGUST 2014 – FRIDAY 5 SEPTEMBER 2014

OPEN DAY

BOYCOTT

BOYCOTT +

Fellows Oval
Saturday 30 August
12-3

Following sweeping, unilateral changes to ANU residential colleges, ANU halls have been forced to boycott Open Day in protest.

These changes, implemented without consultation last week by ANU management, include a centralised application system for incoming students, new criteria to reduce the number of returning residents, and a 5% increase in fees for catered residences and a 7% increase in fees for self-catered residences respectively. ANU Halls believe these changes will fundamentally damage the culture of colleges as it will further exclude students from low SES backgrounds applying, will damage alumni relations and will push out returning students – wrapping up college traditions in a matter of years.

Acting Vice-Chancellor Marnie Hughes-

Warrington argued the increases are needed to meet ongoing residential running costs and provide an accommodation guarantee to new ANU students. However, the Inter-hall Council is concerned that the ultimate strategy to have 50% first years will damage the college experience.

While Bruce Hall administration is still required to conduct Open Day tours, there will be little student involvement. It is hoped that the boycott will dissuade potential students from attending ANU colleges due to the issues likely to emerge in the future and put pressure on ANU management to reverse their decision. In the meantime, a students' day will be held on Fellows Oval during the boycott, featuring a BBQ, Frisbee and footy, eating competition, and live music.

PUBLIC LECTURE

Book Launch: Triumph and Demise, Paul Kelly

Triumph and Demise is the inside account of the hopes, achievements and failures of the Labor Government from 2007 to 2013. Kevin Rudd and Julia Gillard came together, defeated John Howard, formed a brilliant partnership and raised the hopes of a nation, yet fell into disagreements, tensions and then hostilities under the pressures of politics and policy. Veteran journalist Paul Kelly probes the dynamics of the Rudd-Gillard alliance and dissects what tore them apart..

Paul Kelly is Editor-at-Large on The Australian and a weekly commentator on the Sky News Australian Agenda program. He has been involved in reporting and analysing national governments from Gough Whitlam to Julia Gillard.
