Ask Anne: Getting Through the First Round of Assessments

It's that time of the year where people start to realise that university actually involves assessment. Who knew right? Don't worry though, these helpful tips will get you through that first wave of assessments!

1. Ask lots of questions! Wattle forums are an excellent way to engage with your peers, lots of your fellow students utilise them efficiently and often.
2. Engage in activities besides studying! Memory retention research indicates that breaking up study with things you enjoy will help you remember content better. I like to play a page of Beethoven's 5th as a reward for each economics question I answer. Find out what works for you!
3. Stay hydrated! The body is 90% water and your brain uses 90% of that water. By my calculations, this means 180% of water consumption will be used by your brain. Make sure to drink at least 2L a day – tea counts too!
4. When writing essays, remember the old saying that less is more. Now forget it, because if less is more, then think how much more more is.
5. Studies show that stroking a cat or another fuzzy animal reduces stress. Because cats aren't readily available at Bruce, it's worth attempting to catch and stroke a possum or rabbit instead. Alternatively, find the fuzziest person available. Packardians may want to consider seeking out George for this job.

Dragon Night Markets

The ACT Chinese Students and Scholars Association is organising a welcome party on Thursday night in Union Court to allow all students to experience the Chinese culture and our new year environment.

We will be organising a night market called Dragon Night Market. So what is so special about the night market? Food! Lots of food! Not only Chinese food, but also food from other parts of the world.

If you are interested in Chinese culture, or if you like Chinese food, you definitely don't want to miss this! Join us for the Dragon Night Markets! We will be waiting for you there!

PUBLIC LECTURE

Conditions for Democratic Legitimacy of Agencies

Thursday 19 March @ 5.30pm

Weston Theatre, Level 1, JG Crawford Building

Over the past half century or more, the regulatory state, comprising agencies more or less insulated from day-to-day politics, have grown and grown. Activities led in the past by the elected executive government are now delegated to powerful, independent and unelected officials.

This talk will address whether there are principles for the design of independent agencies that would endow them with legitimacy, and whether present day institutional structures live up to those principles. Central banks, in their monetary and in their regulatory roles, will be used as one example, highlighting some successes and some problems.
