2015 CANBERRA INTERNATIONAL

Music Festival

MUSIC, EINSTEIN AND YOU!

The 2015 Festival program will mark the 100th anniversary of Einstein's theory of relativity. Einstein, one of the greatest physicists of all time, was also a fine amateur pianist and violinist and he maintained that music contributed greatly to his imaginative thinking and his understanding of time and space.

Head to www.cimf.org.au for ticketing and more info on the event!

Sam's Study Space Scrutineering

Are you looking to eliminate the undesirable study spaces from your life? Are you sick of the Chifley space crisis? Worry not my friends, this week the Billitin has consulted top studyologist Sam Xiang on where you should be studying around Bruce Hall.

South Quad

There's nothing like the great outdoors. Head out to south quad to catch some sunrays while you write your essays! #Votesamforpoetryslam

Pros: Sunlight, fresh air, no vicious birds

Cons: Cold during winter, scary possums at night

Score: 6/10

Dining Hall

Crank your brooding uni student into overdrive by studying in the corner of the dining hall. You can people-watch as a break, just be careful not to engage the native fauna with eye contact.

Pros: Easy access to snacks

Cons: Easy access to snacks

Score: 5/10

Fishbowl

Fishbowl, more like dishbowl, am I right? You know, because people keep leaving mugs and crockery around? ... I'll let myself out.

Pros: Sally and Sax known to use room as a dance studio

Cons: No actual fish, not bowl shaped: horrible misnomer

Score: α /10

Computer Lab

If all else fails, you can always resort to old faithful. It's a place where mediocre essays are born and dreams are made (literally, I've seen people sleeping in here).

Pros: Plenty of people around to guilt you into working

Cons: Campers!

Score: 7/10

Your Room

What's the point if people can't see you studying?

Score: -1/10

ANU PUBLIC LECTURE

2015 Australasian Aid Conference

Wed 13 May, 9-10.30am

Molonglo Theatre, JG Crawford Building

Last December, the Coalition announced the largest cuts to the aid budget in the history of the Australian aid program: $1 billion or 20 per cent in a single year. How and where will these savings be made?

All will be revealed in the 2015-16 budget to be brought down on Tuesday 12 May. It might not be pleasant, but will be perhaps the most important budget ever for aid. There has never been before, and there may never be again, such radical change in the aid program in a single year. The decisions made in the coming budget will shape the aid program for many more to come.

Join us at the Development Policy Centre the morning after the 2015-16 budget for the third annual aid budget breakfast to learn what the 2015-16 budget means for the future of Australian aid.

Speakers include:

Prof Stephen Howes Director of the Development Policy Centre and Dr Julia Newton-Howes AM CEO of CARE Australia.

ANUSA & PARSA are offering students FREE fitness and yoga classes starting Monday 4th May until Thursday 18th June! All students are welcome to attend, get your free pass from reception.
